Chaos in the Congo

The latest series of atrocities in the Congo only serve to emphasize the impotence of the United Nations in the area. They make a little ridiculous the speech of Haile Selassie insisting that the Security Council take prompt action "to put an end to hostilities, to insure the re-integration of Katanga into the Congolese nation and to guarantee the reign of peace in the Congo."

There are about 15,000 U.N. troops in the Congo, an area one-third the size of the United States. They are supposed to keep the peace among warring tribesmen who never heard of the U.N., displaced people, dissident local leaders, rebellious soldiers. The resolution last February authorized the U.N. to use force if necessary to prevent civil war. But it didn't spell out what the U.N. was to do with the only really legal army in the area when it turned out to be an uncontrolled mob and the government itself the seat of anarchy.

In the U.N. dealings in the Congo, and certainly in the early reactions of people in civilized countries, it seemed to be assumed that the U.N. was dealing with an organized government, a disciplined army, and an established system of traditional justice even though everyone knew better. There simply is no such thing in the Congo, except in Katanga, and possibly among Gizenga's followers. President Kasavubu is a well meaning and politically impotent figurehead who no longer stands for anything. Premier Adoula is reportedly scared of the power of Gen. Mobutu who heads if not controls the Congo army. The vice-premier, Gizenga, received his appointment in an effort to stave off another split among the followers of the dead Lumumba. The lure apparently wasn't enough.

Not only has the U.N. an impossible job to maintain order in this chaos, it is financially deep in trouble. Some $58 million of assessments on member nations have not been paid, including some from the most demanding of members. Only 16 of the 101 members of the U.N. have paid anything on their 1961 assessments. Some, like the Soviet Union, refuse as a matter of principle because they want the Congo to fall into complete anarchy. Others beg off because they say they can't afford it. Others just don't pay. The United States, in addition to its regular assessment of $32 million has paid more than $15 million to defray expenses. But where is the money to come from next year? Efforts to limit the U.N. troops to Negroes is also increasingly difficult as such nations as Ghana, Guinea, Mali and Nigeria are withdrawing units.

In such a chaos, the U.N. ought to stop insisting that Katanga return as a province. We have backed efforts to prevent secession because our own history taught us that every time a state became dissatisfied it could not withdraw. But our history also shows that when governments become destructive of the ends for which they are created among men "it is the right of the people to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness."

Katanga can take care of itself if the U.N. takes care of the mob that calls itself an army in the Congo. This, too, can be an effort to prevent civil war. And the new rebellion of Gizenga is a far more serious one than Moise Tshombe's secession. If Gizenga really is backed by the Communists, the anarchy in the Congo is setting up a ripe plum for him to pick.

A.N. is becoming more and more a sounding board for Communist aspirations and ideas If this is true, it is through default of the free nations, particularly the United States. Communism never has been elect-most every country where it rules, it holds control through terror and force over the bodies of the objectors. Communist Party members, even in the Sovliet Union where the movement certainly has a strong popular backing, make up only a minimal percentage of the popula-

ed into control by a free people. In al-

But the free nations, and again particularly the United States, have consistently abstained in recent months from standing up for the principles of truth and justice. We abstained on the vote to admit Outer Mongoha although it was a deal to get Mauretania accepted. We abstained on the disgraceful censure resolution against South Africa. What now are we going to do about the new move of the African nations to expel South Africa? The National Review, a conservative publication edited by William Buckley, and probably one of the best written opinion magazines on the market, proposes that we throw out the Communist nations from the U.N. and "transform it into an association and alliance of those nations that wish to live and develop in freedom, or we abolish the General Assembly and the Security Council and reduce the U.N. to a non-political international technical center." Such a suggestion will hardly be taken at the present time. But Sen. Fulbright, no conservative, has suggested forming a closer unit-

What to Do With the U.N.? ed organization among nations of the Atlantic community to stand against Red encroachment. Germany's economic minister. Ludwig Erhart, emphasizes that the Common Market is only one step on the way to a full-fledged Atlantic Community. There obviously is disillusion in the U.N., as it is presently operating and a seeking of other ways and means. Actually, if the African nations go through with their effort to expel, the free nations must bring up the same sort of machinery in regards to the Communist nations. This does not mean that we should compound an error of the African nations; it is only to emphasize that which we have failed to do in recent months-that there can be no double standard in the U.N. When former Ambassador to the U.N.

Henry Cabot Lodge displayed the Russian spy mechanism hidden in a seal, it made an impression. We have rather decided that Ambassador Adlai Stevenson has learned a lot about the enemy in his months at the U.N. But for all his speaking ability, he says little except to mediate. As editorial writer John Jessup writes in Life magazine, "the U.N. is the place to educate, not to appease, an illinformed 'world opinion'. Since colonialism is a U.N. issue, its halls should ring with Western denunciations of Soviet colonialism. Since the new African nations value their independence so highly, we should use every occasion to make them think about this simple question: What would be their chances of maintaining independence if the U.S. disappeared from the map? But if Communism should dis-failure to lead the U.N. Our aims are consistent, in fact they are essential, to the aims for peace, liberty and justice everywhere in the world. What is good for the United States is good for the United Nations, however nationalistic that may sound. If we want to save the U.N., we should begin saying so.

Here seems to be the reason for our

Bit of Imagination, Fresh Coats of Paint, Many Hours Change Pantry Into Gift Shop

St. Elizabeth Hospital Auxiliary Will Open New Shop Friday

BY KATHLEEN REARDON

What a few months ago was just an extra and dismal pantry on the first floor of St. Elizabeth Hospital a few steps left of the main lobby is now the cheery and gaily decorated gift shop of the hospital auxiliary.

The room hasn't been used for years, commented Mrs. D. W. Curtin, chairman of the gift shop project.

There is a faucet in the back of the room which has well water and about was painted a light green and now stands in the back of the shop, hiding much of the work area. A small table where the women will serve coffee, soda and milk has the same history.

A delightful and very elegant old pendulum wall clock was found in the hospital attic and now holds a commanding position in the new gift shop for all comers to see as well as hear. No one can remember exactly how the clock got into the attic, how long it's been there or from where it came. "It's just been here for years and years," remarked Mrs. Cur-

The room has an Americano decor. The colors are in keeping with the cherry pink smocks and pinafores worn by auxiliary members when on duty at the hospital. The sidewalls are papered in a pot pourri pattern.

> The large display cases were donated by an Appleton department store and painted cherry pink. The wrought iron railings leading up the few stairs to the stock room were also donated by an Appleton firm. The stairs are covered with a marble linoleum giving them a real mar-

"The painters and carpenters of the hospital are marvelous," the chairman commented, "and they do outstanding work," noting that all the painting and carpentry work had been done by the hospital workers.

A refrigerator, painted pink, of old things loved by our an- of course, stands in the corner of the room and contains the soda and refreshments members will serve.

> The gift shop, which will mark its grand opening Friday, will be entirely staffed by volunteers from the auxiliary. The list of tasks done by volunteer auxiliary members is long and includes escort and hostess service, caring for the book cart, helping feed the patients, reading to them and many other duties. The auxiliary so far has decorated four sunrooms with funds raised from candy sales, bridge marathons and the annual Elizabethan Gallery project. Profits realized from the gift shop will be turned over to the sisters for them to do anything they see fit, stated Mrs. Curtin.

Open to All

The shop is open to anybody who wants to come in and shop or just look around. A visitor does not need to have anyone special in mind when he comes in. "Too many people have the on all the gift boxes and bags just for people who want to take something in to the patient they are visiting," remarked the chairman.

Hours the shop will be open are from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and 6:30 to 9 p.m. Mondays through Saturdays.

A corner curio cabinet will be set up in the main lobby in a few days to call attention to the little shop.

Inside there are items for all members of the family, including articles handmade by auxiliary members. There are fashionable sweaters, slipover and cardigan styles, and dainty white ones hand decorated by the women.

Variety of Items

Prices for items range from one dollar to $10. Decorated candles, wicker wastebaskets, handsewn aprons, jewelry. knick-knacks, figurines, mugs, note paperl baby clothes, ornaments and trinkets are all in the shop, just waiting for someone to notice. Homemade preserves and jellies, gaily wrapped, will also be sold as well as the tins of candy the auxiliary has been selling this

In the toy corner the dolls made and dressed by one of the nuns reign over the Raggedy Anns and Andys, stuffed animals and cuddly kittens, blocks and trucks. The Christmas trees and wreaths and the ceramics in the shop were made in the therapy department of the hospital by the patients. So one can see everyone had a helping hand in this long-dreamed of project.

All the gifts purchased in the shop will be gift wrapped if the customer desires. The auxiliary's trademark even carries through on the ribbon — cherry

Mrs. Joseph Gossens, Kimberly, steps out of the stock room with an armful of toys for the gift shop shelves. The pendulum wall clock, which was found in the hospital attic, is a prized possession of auxiliary members. How it got there, how long it's been there and from where it came cannot be answered by the women. "It's just been here years and years," stated chairman Mrs. D. W. Curtin.

project, shows Mrs. Charles Reichert, Appleton, one of the white knit sweaters auxiliary members have hand-decorated with colorful and dainty flowers. Some of the many items the women will sell in their new gift shop at St. Elizabeth Hospital can be seen in the glass display case. The shop, which was once an unused pantry, is on the first floor just off the main lobby. Auxiliary members, carpenters and painters have been working for six weeks readying the shop for Friday's grand opening. Below, Beth Oudenhoven, Appleton, reaches for the bride doll made and decorated by one of the hospital nuns. One corner of the shop is devoted entirely to children's toys which are certain to please any youngster, whether he is a hospital patient or not.

Mrs. Robert DeCock, co-chairman of the gift shop, enjoys a cup of coffee with Dr. W. S. Giffin at the table where auxiliary members will serve coffee and soda to visitors. The display case at the left was an original old hutch with porcelain knobs and a linoleum top. The painters removed all the dingy brown varnish and painted the cabinet cherry pink in keeping with the color of the smocks and pinafores worn by auxiliary members. An Americano decor prevails in the gift shop which was an unused pantry until six weeks ago.
